

Akin Oyebo

Akin is a trained economist turned banking professional with a passion for social and economic development in Sub Saharan Africa. He started his career at the Lagos Business School of the Pan African University where he was Research Assistant responsible for writing case studies, business plans and industry reports. He has worked in the banking industry since 2005 in various roles including research, strategy and most recently retail banking.

In his current role as Head SME Banking at Stanbic IBTC Bank, Akin is responsible for designing and implementing the value proposition to help SME customers run and grow their businesses. He was responsible for the introduction of the bank's SME loan products, through which over N10 billion has been disbursed to 5,000 businesses that hitherto would not have been able to access finance from banks.
